Title page of Pharmacopoeia Augustana, Augsburg, 1613, in the collection of the history of medicine division, National Library of Medicine, Public Health Service, Bethesda, Md.

In the engraving by Lucas Kilian (1579-1637), three female figures symbolize pharmacy. Seated between Solomon and Mithradates, cupids hold a pine or cedar cone, another pharmaceutical symbol. In Solomon's hand is a chart with drawings of hyssop and cedar twigs.

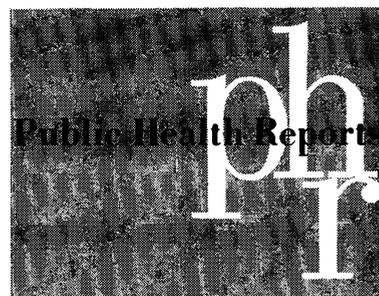

The title page is one of more than 50 prints that comprise an exhibit, Medical Symbolism in Books of the Renaissance and Baroque, on view at the library until the end of October.
